SUMMER SCHOOL – BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES IN A GLOCAL ENVIRONMENT

Summer schools provide students with a high-quality international experience as part of internationalization. They meet foreign students and lecturers, develop ideas and deepen their knowledge in a specific field throughout the week.

Through summer schools, we strengthen the involvement of the university and its faculties in the local and international environment. Summer schools are intended for students who want to improve their employability by gaining competencies in identifying business opportunities in local, regional and global environments, with an emphasis on values that support local self-sufficiency and sustainable development while making use of the advantages of globalization.

The summer school content is intended primarily to contribute to the development of the following competencies:

- knowledge and understanding of the process of searching for and identifying business opportunities, and the ability to apply them in practice;
- knowledge and understanding of mechanisms for defining potential opportunities;
- knowledge and ability to conduct market research;
- knowledge and understanding of the evaluation processes of a business idea, its characteristics and market opportunities;
- the ability to present a business idea effectively to the local and international public (communication competencies).
